GMS NEWSLETTER

EDITION #17

There is a famous quote by the author James Baldwin; "Children have never been very good at listening to their elders, but they have never failed to imitate them." There is so much truth to this. You may ask your child to behave a certain way, but unless they see this behaviour reflected in you, they're unlikely to feel compelled to listen. Even when children are very young and it might seem as if they are too young to understand what's going on around them, they are always watching what you do and how you act, and they absorb this information like a sponge. They learn how to deal with stress by watching how you handle your stress. They learn how to treat other people by watching how you treat others. If you want them to be kind, be kind. If you want them to speak quietly, speak quietly. So even if you think they aren't paying attention to you, be a positive role model for your children and model the behaviours you'd like to see in them.

The three most valuable things we can give the children in our lives are the time to decide, the space to create, and the love they deserve!

Let them take as long as they wish, be as silly as they like and create anything they choose. The imagination of our children is something we should never question!

- 1. I believe in you 100%. Whatever you want to be, I'll be right behind you.*
- 2. Be yourself, that's all that you can do. You're amazing just as you are and I love you.*

3. I trust you and you can trust me. If you make a mistake or do something wrong, that's ok! We all make mistakes!

4. I will always be by your side. No matter how far away you are from me, just call and I'll be right there!

5. I'm your friend. I may be a lot older than you, but I love being with you just as much as you love being with me!

6. Try to be as kind as you can to everyone you meet. Smile, love, care and laugh. That's all I ask of you.

7. Try your best, that's good enough for me. But whatever you do. Don't ever give up. Don't ever let doubt get in your way. If you can imagine it, you can become it!

8. If you see someone crying on the playground, sitting on their own or looking lonely, go over, hold their hand and make sure they're ok! Imagine what it would be like to be so sad!

9. Take care of plants, animals and insects. They're all part of the universe and so are you. The world is your home but it's also theirs. Let's share it together.

I love you, unconditionally!

FINANCIAL EDUCATION

Research recommends that financial education should start as early as possible and be taught in schools. Financial education is a long-term process. Building it into curriculums from an early age allows children to acquire the knowledge and skills to build responsible financial behaviour throughout each stage of their education.

COVID-19: A Blessing in Disguise

Wreaking havoc, destruction, desperation and despair, corona virus the silent disease has actually brought about many advantages along with its ill effects. Looking on the bright side, many areas around the world where many animals have had to vacate their homes due to tourist attractions or increasing human activities have returned amidst the quite aura due to lockdown in these areas. The canals in Venice have become crystal clear and the dolphins which were forced to retreat have been sighted taking a dive in the serene canals and another pastime of the locals is also to admire the gracious swans these peaceful waters. In other parts of the world, monkeys have been seen strolling around in Thailand, deer have been sauntering in Japan and wild turkeys in California. Lucrative for us humans though, we seem to be forced to get out of our lazy lifestyles where we have to do everything physically by ourselves since we are under lockdown. Having so much time is also giving us the golden opportunities to focus on our hobbies and on our family members. I myself have been spending time, reading, learning photography from my father, mastering the art of cooking from my mother and also working on my blog with so much time on my hands when I am not studying. Having plenty of leisurely time provides the perfect opportunity to reflect upon oneself and set the perfect development goals for oneself as well as effective long-term and short-term goals.

Moreover, focusing on our hobbies and spending time developing them to do something fruitful can't be a more sensible and interesting way to get by the endless days of lockdown. Honing already possessed talents and attempting to develop new ones are also a good way to spend time. Thanks to technology, we can still be up to date and interact with friends and family via video call. The new e-learning system is quite unique but getting in the flow with it, it actually helps us to see our friends and teachers and learn together while sharing ideas. As we have noticed, there seem to be more perks than losses in this time of crisis. Thus, the most logical and the best thing to do right now is keep the spirit of hope inside Pandora's box and make the best of what we have. As it is popularly said in French, "Après la pluie le beau temps." Which literally means good weather after rain and its English translation is 'Every cloud has a silver lining.'

BLIND EARS, DEAF EYES

Blind are their ears, and deaf are their eyes
They see the truth, yet they don't hear the lies
They seek words of affirmation, from a man who denies
Because blind are their ears, deaf are their eyes.

Blood taints the dreary expanse of skies
Yet a polaroid set before their eyes makes the painful cries seem like lies
Since blind are their ears, deaf are their eyes.

The rebel buried by barbarians lies set in the ground due to a demonic demise
But a fool, in naivety, he does surmise
That deaf are his ears, and blind are his eyes

What if tainted was your tongue, and malicious your mind?
And his eyes were deaf, and his ears were blind?
And if you a, trusted one, he found,
would it not be a sin most profound?

Nay, for he would not see his fateful demise
Lurking in front of his intoxicated eyes
He could not decipher the truth, could not discern the lies
For blind were his ears, and deaf were his eyes.

IS THERE ANY BEAUTY IN WAR?

Whispers of the wind outrun this world

Swirling in circles, spiraling all around

In the cold night where all lay dead

Tears down my mind, my body unaware

I miss the waves lapping on the shore

Dandelion seeds wreathing the Earth

In the morning light while we lay in peace

Now neither is it serene, nor any sorrow

All we live for is just another tomorrow

And then children will wake up

With hope to see the chirping birds

Yet only their imagination remains colorful

For engulfed with the blood, the terror, the pain

The beauty of Earth has now vanquished...

BREAK THE MYTHS OF AUTISM

Autism is not a disability, it is a different ability !

While we celebrate April 2 as Autism awareness day, let us discuss some common myths about autism and assure that each person with the Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) is provided the opportunity to achieve the highest possible quality of life.

Myth 1: Autism Is A Mental Health Issue:

Fact: When people discuss mental health disorders, autism often gets lumped into this category. However, autism is a neurological disorder.

Myth 2: Children with Autism Can't Make Friends:

Fact: Autism usually comes with some sort of social impairment. If a child with autism seems reluctant to engage, it may not be because they don't want to socialize. Instead, it might be that they recognize that they have a difficult time interacting with others.

Myth 3: Children with Autism Are Low Functioning:

Fact: Many people with some form of an autism spectrum disorder are of average intelligence and grow up to have normal everyday lives.

Myth 4: Children with Autism Don't Feel or Understand Emotion:

Fact: While it is true that children with autism may process emotion and show it differently, it doesn't make them any less emotional or feeling. In fact, an individual with autism is arguably more empathic than most people.
